returned in European Patent Application No. EPO 88309191.0. This EPO application claims priority of the parent of this application, U.S. Patent Application Serial No. 07/104,682, filed October 5, 1987, for "THERMAL BLANKET", which is now abandoned, and the identified application.

The Search Report indicates that all of the references found by the Examiner form the technological background of the invention. In addition, U.S. Patent No. 4,572,188 is designated as being cited in the application.

Also disclosed are the three references returned with the European Search Report. The first reference, U.S. Patent 4,572,188 has already been cited and discussed in the preliminary amendment to this application, submitted October 10, 1988.

The German Patent DE3308553 was provided without translation; the applicants do not have an English translation of this patent. From the figures, the patent appears to cover a vest with a series of tubular chambers, which might be inflated when the vest is in use.

U.S. Patent 3,714,947 describes a baby blanket designed to control hypothermia and consisting of an envelope having an upper portion with a provision for circulating a temperature-controlled fluid through the blanket.

The Examiner is requested to consider these references and to make of record those deemed to be material to examination of this application.

Respectfully submitted,

Terrance A. Meador
